- 13:11:26 From Herman Baxter Sr : [Thumbs up!]
- 13:11:30 From Jedidiah Cary : Yes you and screen
- 13:11:34 From Joe Pytleski : Yes.
- 13:11:35 From DanKitinoja : yes
- 13:11:36 From Chris Respass : yes
- 13:11:36 From Richard Ferris : yes
- 13:11:37 From Herman Baxter Sr : Yes
- 13:11:38 From Mark : Yes
- 13:11:42 From Bryan Yeo : yes!
- 13:12:07 From Michael Karpf : I see it
- 13:12:16 From Matt Smith : Hey Craig!
- 13:12:36 From Jarod Walston : I see the powerpoint and everyone else
- 13:12:52 From Abraham Kuruvilla : Great, thanks.
- 13:13:29 From Jedidiah Cary : the slides are nor changing
- 13:14:40 From Jarod Walston : Got it now!
- 13:15:04 From Michael Karpf : 2:14AM Wednesday in Bangkok
- 13:26:49 From Nathan Rice : Thanks so much for helping us to stay sharp with our preaching! Very much appreciate your time.
- I have to check out early to go to a meeting. Could a link be made available with a replay of this webinar?
- 13:27:04 From D Scott Barfoot : Yes!
- 13:27:24 From Nathan Rice to D Scott Barfoot (Privately) : Thanks Dr. B! Great to see your face and hear your voice.

13:27:48 From D Scott Barfoot to Nathan Rice (Privately) : Thanks you are important to us!

13:36:47 From Matt Smith : My question is: why is it that Christo-centric (Christ-centered) preaching seems to be the prominent and accepted hermeneutical approach in most conservative, evangelical seminaries today? Why is it assumed and accepted? How do you respond to their accusations that anything less is mere moralistic preaching?

13:36:48 From Joe Pytleski : Help us understand the difference between your "thrust" vs. big idea "big idea."

13:37:47 From Michael Karpf : this has been very helpful. most preachers jump from text to application without taking into account the pericopal theology.

13:37:51 From Kenji Adachi : what are the common/biggest mistakes when making the thrust from text to application?

13:38:16 From Michael Karpf : can we have a copy of the slides please?

13:38:28 From Henry Ow : When you talk about the thrust are you referring to the thrust of the biblical author (Moses, Mark, or etc) or the divine author (the Spirit) or both?

13:39:39 From Jarod Walston : How can we build on what we've learned from "The Big Idea" of preaching from Haddon Robinson and move toward Christiconic preaching/pericopal theology?

13:42:20 From ricknahr : How many words do you think you typically use to articulate the thrust of the text?

13:42:31 From jonmoreno : Can you surface some of the most common textual "clues" that reveal the author's thrust?

13:43:37 From Henry Ow : If the thrust is how the Spirit and Biblical author attempts to communicate through a text, then would you say that the NT authors when using the OT capture correctly the thrust of the text intended by OT author. Example Matt 1:22? Did the thrust change?

13:44:27 From DanKitinoja : I like Jon Moreno's question above

13:45:08 From Joe Pytleski : Repetition has to be one, correct?

13:45:38 From Jarod Walston : Thank you Dr. Kuruvilla! Love and use your commentaries. Nothing else like them in my library.

13:45:52 From craigschill : A key to finding the thrust is having strong exegetical skills.

13:46:36 From Joe Pytleski : Agree Craig

- 13:47:12 From Ronnie Stanley, Jr. : Thank you very much for your insight,
- 13:48:34 From Jedidiah Cary : Do you think that there is only one thrust of a text.
- 13:49:24 From ecmcs : I have found that when I take the text, read it carefully and thoughtfully and then prayerfully saying, "LORD Jesus, why did you want me to hear this." I have found that He always wants me to understand the meaning of the passage for me.
- Thoughts
- 13:49:49 From Henry Ow : Are you saying that an author doesn't obey the rules of a genre (Narrative, Poetry, Epistle) to develop a thrust of the text?
- 13:50:28 From Henry Ow : A repost: If the thrust is how the Spirit and Biblical author attempts to communicate through a text, then would you say that the NT authors when using the OT capture correctly the thrust of the text intended by OT author. Example Matt 1:22? Did the thrust change?
- 13:50:53 From craigschill : As Dr. Kuruvilla has been sharing this model at different seminaries, etc., what has the response been? How has God used this work in homiletics as a whole?
- 13:51:21 From Jason K : What is the upper limit of how big you think a pericope can be? How do you manage preaching a long pericope while also managing the attention span and time limit of the audience?
- 13:51:31 From Ronnie Stanley, Jr. : Do you find that Genre will inform the theological idea
- 13:51:38 From Matt Smith : Has Dr. Kuruvilla been able to share in the SBC seminaries and what has the response been there?
- 13:51:45 From warren : Thank you Dr. Kuruvilla! Thank you Dr. Barfoot, this is very helpful.
- 13:51:51 From Mark : Thank you for spending your time, skills and heart with us this afternoon!
- 13:53:18 From Henry Ow : So then the NT authors don't employ a pericopal theology to interpret the OT?
- 13:53:26 From kevinchoate : Thank you Dr. Kuruvilla! This has been a blessing.
- 13:53:54 From Jarod Walston : Can preachers effectively understand the thrust of Scripture simply studying English translations? It seems that a preacher needs to work with the biblical languages to some extent, or perhaps heavily, when they're working to discover the thrust of the text.

- 13:54:58 From ricknohr : I am interested in more
- 13:55:19 From markrobinson : Thank you Dr. Kuruvilla! We appreciate your time today. It has been a blessing to hear your approach to homiletics
- 13:55:21 From Jedidiah Cary : I am also interested in more
- 13:55:34 From Jedidiah Cary : Thanks for you time today.
- 13:55:52 From Michael Karpf : can we please get a copy of your presentation?
- 13:56:12 From Henry Ow : What would it look like to develop further work in this area of research?
- 13:56:18 From DanKitinoja : When you are in Louisville get ice cream at Graeters
- 13:56:57 From ricknohr : That would be helpful
- 13:57:06 From DanKitinoja : Yes, that would be helpful
- 13:57:09 From Richard Ferris : Thanks so much Drs. B and K!
- 13:57:15 From Tim Hawkins : THm from 2017, trained in pericopal theology preaching ... have been preaching full-time for the past three years since graduation with Christiconic approach specifically ... I'd say the response has been rather harsh toward it. But toward young, infantile, even unbelievers, the approach has been fresh, helpful, and received with an appreciation of application.
- 13:57:15 From treys : That would be great!
- 13:57:20 From timfi's iPhone : yes...we need examples!
- 13:57:34 From Bryan Yeo : Working through a book together would be absolutely tremendous
- 13:58:07 From Jeff Kelley : I like the idea of working through a book together.
- 13:58:24 From Bryan Yeo : Thank you Dr. Kuruvilla and Dr. Barfoot!
- 13:58:37 From craigschill : Yes - great session!
- 13:58:48 From Jedidiah Cary : Thank you guys for your time
- 13:58:49 From DanKitinoja : thank you for doing this today. Love that thought: the thrust of the text. what is the author doing
- 13:58:55 From Kurt Busenitz : Thank you!

- 13:58:57 From Jacob Marshall : Great session. Thanks!
- 13:58:58 From lctaco : Dr. B and Dr. K, thank you for making this venue possible
- 13:59:02 From Chris Respss : awesome
- 13:59:40 From Brian Lam : thank you. Dr. K. really appreciate your passion
- 14:00:00 From Jason K : Thank you!
- 14:00:01 From Chris Respss : Thank you
- 14:00:08 From Herman Baxter Sr : Thanks Dr. B & K!
